Sixth Sunday of Lent - Palm Sunday

Look, your king is coming to you, humble, and mounted on a donkey

Matthew 21

You move toward me,
And something in me opens,
Without my instigation or initiative.
I feel you before I fully see you,
A quiet gravity drawing me out of myself.
Your humility enters me,
Like light slipping under a closed door,
Unsettling the parts of me,
That cling to importance,
Softening the places that have,
Grown hard with self-protection.
As you draw near,
I feel my breath deepen.
I feel my heart bow, not out of duty,
But because your gentleness awakens,
A longing in me, to be gentle too.
Your presence moves through me,
Like a Mediterranean wind,
and suddenly,
I want to lay down, everything:
My pride, my noise, my striving ambition,
Like cloaks at your feet.
You are not just approaching Jerusalem,
You are approaching me,
And I feel myself yielding,
Becoming spacious enough,
To receive you.
